WOODY ALLEN'S BACK TO THE FUTURE

MUSIC: BACK TO THE FUTURE THEME.

ANNOUNCER

It was the time traveling mind bender of the 80's. It was the crowd favorite that spawned two successful sequels. It was the hit series that made Michael J. Fox a household name and made a lot of people recognize Christopher Lloyd on the street. And now it's back and in the hands of one of the most intellectually nebbish directors of our generation. It's Woody Allen's Back to the Future Trilogy! We start with episode one: Back to the Future.

WOODY ALLEN

Doc! Doc! Open up, you gotta help me!

CHRISTOPHER LLOYD

Good gracious, Marty, what is it?

WOODY ALLEN

What is it? What is it? Well, for one thing I, uhm, you know, I went back in time in your souped up DeLorean, which, you know, I'm sorry about the fender. I have insurance. But I don't understand, I mean, everything's like it was in the fifties. You know, Eisenhower is president, women's nipples won't be seen through their shirts for another 20 years. And my mother, uhm, don't get me started about my mother.

PATRICK

(as Marty's mother.)

Marty? Do you want to kiss me?

WOODY ALLEN

Do I want to kiss you? What, did Kierkegaard hate Frederik Schlegel? I mean, yeah, of course I want to kiss you. I think your beautiful. But no, I can't, you're my mother, it's wrong. It's completely wrong, in a Freudian sense and every other sense for that matter.

PATRICK
 Would you like to see me in my undies?

WOODY ALLEN
 Oh God, if I'm not going to Hell for this I'm at least getting a studio apartment in Heaven with no air conditioning.

CHRISTOPHER LLOYD
 (as Biff.)
 McFly! I'm gonna pound you into the dirt.

WOODY ALLEN
 Biff! My God...is that your bicep or do you have the cast from Chekov's Three Sisters up your shirt sleeve.

CHRISTOPHER LLOYD
 Put 'em up, McFly. We're gonna duke
 it out man to man!

WOODY ALLEN
 No, really, I couldn't. Thanks, but...I'm basically a non-violent participator. You know, I even look at a clenched fist I break out into severe hives and fear of death.

JAY
 Part 2 in the series is the acclaimed Back to the Future Part 2.

CHRISTOPHER LLOYD
 (as Christopher Lloyd.)
 Marty! You gotta come with me, Back to the Future!

WOODY ALLEN
 But why? I don't understand. You know, everything turned out all right in the end. My parents turned out to be very hip, smart, beautiful people, which I can't relate to. And I got a brand new truck, which is, you know, a little macho for me, but I can adapt.

CHRISTOPHER LLOYD
 We gotta go straighten out your son
 Marty. He's ruining everything!

WOODY ALLEN
 What are you saying? I have a son?

PATRICK
 (as Woody Allen.)
 What are you doing here?

WOODY ALLEN
 What am I doing? I'm your father from the past. What are you doing here?

PATRICK
 Well I gotta tell you, you look great.

WOODY ALLEN
 I do? Well so do you?

PATRICK
 Really? Well, you know, I've been working out. You know, I watch tennis every week and every third Sunday of the month I do a push up.

WOODY ALLEN
 Me, too. Don't want to over do it and get musclebound. This is so strange.

PATRICK
 It is.

WOODY ALLEN
 It's like we're living out the final scenario of some experimental European film.

 Bergman.

WOODY ALLEN

I was gonna say Bergman! You know,
Cries and Whispers.

PATRICK

Or The Seventh Seal, you know, where the crowd of people is dancing along the beach with Death.

WOODY ALLEN

Yeah, funny like that, like a cross between Groucho Marx and Rudolf Hess.

JAY

And the third and most painful chapter in the series: Back to the Future Part 3.

WOODY ALLEN

What are you doing here?

PATRICK

Yeah, what are you doing here?

CHRISTOPHER LLOYD

(as Woody Allen.)

Well, you know, I went back in time to the old west.

PATRICK

You look great in the cowboy clothes by the way.

CHRISTOPHER LLOYD

Really?

WOODY ALLEN

Yeah, you remind me of a young Cary Grant, only sexier. Like a wild animal of wanton lust in over-sized chaps.

PATRICK

You know, this whole scenario is very existential. It reminds me of--

CHRISTOPHER LLOYD AND WOODY ALLEN

Kierkegaard?

PATRICK

I was gonna say, Kierkegaard.

WOODY ALLEN

Or Strindberg, you know, without all the angst.

ANNOUNCER

The Back to the Future Trilogy directed by Woody Allen...It seemed like a good idea at the time.

CLOSING MUSIC FROM BACK TO THE FUTURE.

WOODY ALLEN

So now the trilogy is over. You know, Biff doesn't get to rule the world, everything's gone back to normal and I get to have sex with a hot high school girl. She's a little old for me but...I'll make do. So there you go. Time travel isn't always neat and tidy. You know, sometimes you don't have any banana peels to put into your flux capacitor. If that sounds off-handedly sexual it was on purpose. But I think old Doc Brown said it best..."You can do anything if you put your mind to it." He also kept saying "Great Ceasar's ghost" a lot. Which makes him a bit of an idiot. Good night.
